

Titanic Hits Ice Cream

September 8, 2020

A recent email from Amy White of MoveOn.org — an activist outfit that got its start defending Bill Clinton's sexual indiscretions — theorized that, this election, "the GOP strategy to win is to use their billionaire donors to flood battleground states with fearmongering, racist ads. . . ."

The snuck-in assumption that Democrats lack Billionaire Donors is important, for the actual Trump strategy is to attack Democrats for their rich elitism. A Trump campaign ad targeting Speaker of the House Nancy Pelosi's Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous-like ice cream obsession is quite powerful.

Insiders like Pelosi and Frisco "public servants" have special rules for themselves, while sticking it to the rest of us. We peons. We outsiders.

And Pelosi's flaunting of expensive freezers and confections is not mere fluke.

You see, Speaker Pelosi (D-Calif.) also smarts from recent revelations that she had flouted California lockdown rules and mask-wearing mandates to illegally rendezvous, sans mask, at a hair salon, speakeasy-style.

While MoveOn's Ms. White seeks to "put an end to Donald Trump's authoritarianism," what she seems oblivious to is her own side's elitism.

As shown in Pelosi's hometown. San Francisco's government-run gyms catering to police officers, judges, lawyers, bailiffs, and paralegals have been open for months — while privately owned exercise establishments serving the hoi polloi have been shut down the whole time.

"It's shocking, it's infuriating," one gym entrepreneur told a TV station. "Even though they're getting exposed, there are no repercussions, no ramifications? It's shocking."

But it's not.

Trump got into office because he was seen as an outsider. Insiders like Pelosi and Frisco "public servants" have special rules for themselves, while sticking it to the rest of us. We peons. We outsiders.

It's old school classism, as in the "classless" Soviet Union or Marie Antoinette's France.

Not a good look.

This is Common Sense. I'm Paul Jacob.
